The Mel Hoppenheim School of Cinema explores cinema as a form of artistic expression and aims to graduate filmmakers, animators, film historians, critics and theorists who appreciate both the medium's history and its potential. Students gain experience with digital and analogue technologies and have access to animation, sound and postproduction labs and studios, modern screening facilities, and extensive film and video collections.

The School's studio programs strive to balance practical and creative aspects of filmmaking. In the process of making films together, students explore techniques, develop critical and aesthetic perspectives, and articulate their unique artistic personalities.

The Awards Ceremony recognizes excellence in film animation and production, and academic achievements in film studies.

To all our supporters, we extend our warmest thanks.
